

Dana Theus, Speaker & Facilitator

An engaging speaker, meeting facilitator and workshop leader, Dana Theus motivates and outfits audiences to lead change and explore the highest potential in themselves and their organizations.

Dana equips emerging leaders with tools and strategies that shortcut their journey to personal and career success. She helps established leaders activate the power of their career brand to engage their organizations and access new levels of confidence and impact. And she coaches women aspiring to greater leadership responsibility, helping them retell the stories they must heal to emerge into their full potential and find their authentically confident voice.

Dana also helps organizations unlock the power of their people by designing culture-shift coaching and training programs for team leaders, which leverage scaleable online InPower Coaching methodologies and extensive video/workbook libraries.

Dana has spent her career helping individuals and organizations succeed as they venture into new territory, working inside and alongside fortune 50 companies, entrepreneurial technology startups, government agencies and non-profits. Her functional experience spans coaching, management consulting, leadership development, change management, executive team facilitation, strategic planning, marketing, branding, communications, product development, product management and international government affairs.
